Huntley's H.S Crocker Wins MCEDC's Business Champion Award

Congratulations to Ron Giordano and his team at H.S. Crocker for winning the 2017 McHenry County Economic Development

Corporation's (MCEDC) Business Champion Award in November. For the past ten years, MCEDC has recognized outstanding companies who have positively contributed to McHenry County's economy and who have exhibited business acumen and vision. H.S. Crocker of Huntley won in the category for businesses with over 100 employees and President Ron Giordano accepted the award. The company provides high quality printing and die cutting services for the food and pharmaceutical industries. (For example, if you like coffee or yogurt, you have probably used one of their products as they make and print the lids for Chobani yogurt and Keurig K-cups.) H.S. Crocker is an employee owned company and their employees share in and participate in the company's decision making process. They offer employee health clinics, promote wellness in the workplace and seek to employ individuals that have been unemployed primarily in the sector of those ages 45 and above. H.S. Crocker is a green company and recently spent over 25 million in capital investment and expansion developments. The company was founded in 1856 and built the first phase of their corporate headquarters in Huntley in 1995. Four additional Huntley businesses were finalists for the Business Champion award: Henderson Products, Image industries, TEQ, and Dean Foods. Way to go Huntley!
